

ON THE BENCH

By Byron Higgin

I came from Grantsburg, WI, where they race snowmobiles on water to determine a World Champion.

That's weird enough, but I never thought I'd land in the Belgian world of Rolle Bolle.

But I did, and I like it very much. Friday night I sat down with George DeSutter, an old Rolle Bolle bowler from way back.

"My legs won't let me do it any more," said George. But he's drawn to the game just the same. I sat down to talk and George said, "Do you know the rules," and I admitted I had a lot to learn. So for two hours, I got the quick course on Rolle Bolle. Thanks to George, I understand the game so much better.

I'm amazed at the curves and angles it takes to bowl toward the pin. When they brought out the measuring device to measure which one was closer I thought it was a special device. "They use antennas from cars," George said.

Like I said, there is so much to learn.
